Southern Cone Counterterrorism Plans

150

Security officials of Chile, Argentina, and Uruguay are reportedly expanding their cooperative anti-subversive activities to include assassination of top-level terrorists in exile in Europe.

The intelligence cooperation program of Argentina, Bolivia, Brazil, Chile, Paraguay, and Uruguay, known as "Condor," already includes development of a centralized data collection capability and the direction of joint operations in the southern part of South America.

The Chilean, Argentinian, and Uruguayan services now plan to train teams in Buenos Aires for the missions in Western Europe. The plans and targets of the teams will be withheld from at least some government leaders.

The largest concentration of Latin American exiles in Europe is in Paris. [REDACTED]
